NATIONAL RECONCILIATION WEEK 2019

Reconciliation is about strengthening relationships between Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and non-Indigenous peoples, for the benefit of all Australians. While reconciliation can mean different things to different people, the State of Reconciliation in Australia report (2016) identified five integral and interrelated dimensions to measure reconciliation by: historical acceptance; race relations; equality and equity; institutional integrity; and unity.

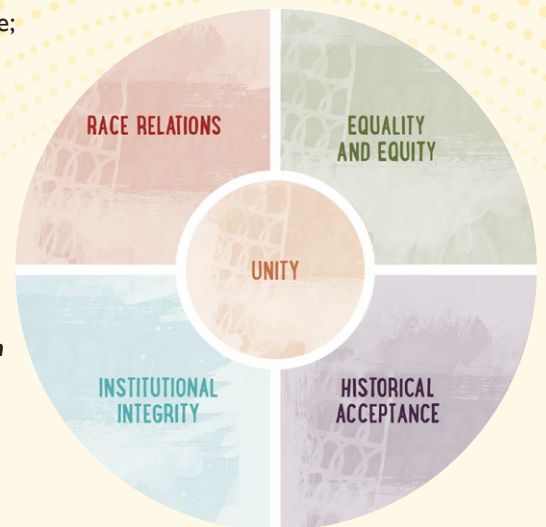

All are interrelated, therefore the state of reconciliation in Australia will only ever be as strong as its weakest dimension.

This year's NRW theme Grounded on Truth: Walk Together with Courage focuses on the race relations dimension of reconciliation. Building upon the 2018 theme, which focused on historical acceptance, we're encouraging all Australians to build relationships that are based on that foundation.
